Ace the Interview:
Strategies for Preparing & Conducting Stellar Job Interviews for Graduate Students

Wednesday, September 10 • 1:30 to 3 p.m. • Career Services

Do you want to nail your first interview? Are you nervous about making mistakes because you have spent the last 6+ years as a graduate student and postdoc and never had to conduct a real interview? Then join Dr. Tom Magaldi of the New York Academy of Sciences to learn useful strategies that will ensure that you ace future job interviews.

Kindly RSVP at http://bit.ly/1tAEAIZ

Dr. Tom Magaldi is the Director of Science Alliance, the professional development branch of the New York Academy of Sciences. Tom develops and implements innovative workshops and courses that provide early career scientists with a range of soft and business skills that will be essential for all careers. He received his PhD in genetics from Yale University and then conducted a postdoc at the National Cancer Institute. Tom has worked as a math and science tutor for underprivileged children in New Haven and as an Adjunct Professor of Biology at Montgomery College and the University of the District of Columbia. He has also worked as a virtual intern for the United States Department of State.