The Program in Latin American Studies (PLAS) offers grants to graduate students for research in Latin America during summer 2015. Preference will be given to graduate students who are enrolled in the PLAS graduate student certificate program. Students must be able to work in the major local language of the region they propose to visit. PLAS does not offer grants for language training, except in the case of a student who, in order to carry out his or her dissertation research, must study an indigenous language of Latin America not taught at Princeton. Nor does PLAS provide support for writing the dissertation or for equipment and materials.

In addition to the Summer Funding Application, applicants must complete the online cover sheet accessible from the PLAS home page. In addition, they must submit by the deadline two (2) copies of their official transcript, and request that two (2) letters of recommendation be sent to the Program in Latin American Studies, 309-316 Burr Hall. Letters can be submitted electronically to plas@princeton.edu.

Grant recipients will be required to provide an accounting of expenses, and to submit a research report. They may also be asked to present the results of their research in a graduate student seminar hosted by PLAS. A summary of the research project may also be published in the PLAS Newsletter or other publications. All publications, conference talks, and papers resulting from the funded research should acknowledge the support of the Program in Latin American Studies (PLAS).

Please direct any inquiries to the Program at 258-4148 or via e-mail to plas@princeton.edu.
