

Ph.D. Dissertation Embargo Request and Approval

According to Graduate School policy, doctoral students may request a two-year dissertation embargo (i.e., a delay in the publication and access) to protect their ability to publish their work as a book. The full statement of policy may be found at the Graduate School website.

I, _____ request an embargo on my dissertation entitled,

_____ because

Student Signature: _____

I/We _____ and/or _____

as the adviser(s) of this dissertation, approve the student's request to embargo her/his dissertation.

Comments:

Signature: _____

Adviser 1

Adviser 2

Please Note: This form must be signed and uploaded as an attachment to the student's degree application. If approved for an embargo, the applicant will receive an email confirmation from the Graduate School which should be presented to Mudd Library at the time of submission of the dissertation to the library. Applicants without an active Princeton email account should provide a personal email account on the advanced degree application.